Dear Climate Corporation:

I am writing to apply to your Intern: Software Engineer, Cloud Infrastructure position. This May I am going to be finishing what has been an enlightening experience at the University of California, Berkeley where I first heard about your company from a representative at a career fair.

I have an interest in this position for a couple of different reasons. First, I am an Applied Mathematics major with a Computer Science concentration. I have a strong background in Matlab, Python, and a few other languages. I have taken multiple classes which have required me to use both in addition to giving me a Unix background. Moreover, I communicate with my peers effectively and have served as a leader in community service organizations. Finally, one of the biggest reasons I am interested in working with The Climate Corporation is my love for difficult problems. In my time at Berkeley, I learned that I love to challenge myself. I switched into a more difficult major, did not hesitate to take demanding classes, and did all I could to demand more of myself. I want to continue to find opportunities to challenge myself after I graduate, and I know that working at The Climate Corporation will provide that for me. Something about what The Climate Corporation does when compared to other companies that I've seen really excites me.

Please feel free to ask me any questions - my contact information can be found here and on my resume. Also, I am located just across the Bay, so I am just a stone's throw away. Thank you for your consideration and time.

Sincerely yours,

Patrick Yu
